mia vigar, universal you....
Category: Music

Sincere apologies that this missive finds you slightly late and truncated, not you the missive that is but we've had a week and a half to forget wherein we've seemingly suffered the modern equivalent of the biblical plagues having fallen to the dreaded toothache syndrome. Is there anything more painful than toothache we wonder. Well yes. Earache and backache if you must know both of whom swiftly visited our embattled persona in quick pursuit. In between all this we've had digs issues - hell so many stories here that aside being able to ramble at length for pages upon pages will simultaneously have you weeping in the aisles whilst wondering exactly what medication our landlord is on - rat poison and arsenic if I had my way. Add to that the builders who our landlord decided to get in to lay a floor - obviously the first time they'd come across laminate floors and hammers we suspect - a pleasant chap it has to be said with a rather annoying penchant for snarling and coughing up bits of his lung in between bouts of shouting at his mobile phone. Oh yea - and the decorators. Hell I wish I'd have videotaped it - it would have won the Cannes short film comedy award..

there should be a few more reviews later plus the latest singled out...tomorrow new order and undertones....and barring homelessness over the weekend drradio, some blr stuff, a few distant noise things and loads more....

Mia Vigar 'I dare you' (Hungry Audio). Literally just popping through the letter box and immediately sidling up to our hi-fi and in to our affections is this damn cute and dinky thing from Mia Vigar who apparently has been wooing all and sundry in recent times under the guise of Luma Lane and True Adventures finding home for her crooked concoctions on such esteemed imprints as Twisted Nerve and Cherryade (whose latest outing features elsewhere in these pages courtesy of those loveable imps The Lovely Eggs). Prized from her forthcoming debut 'true adventures happen inside your head' which features guest contributions from members of Sennen (whose debut full length has to be up there as one of our favourites of the year) and David Brewis of Field Music and man who it seems who can't pass a recording studio without the overwhelming desire to pop in, jog in to whatever is going on at the time given his regular cameo roles on other people's work during his main charges sabbatical. Anyhow 'I dare you' is devilishly catchy and kooky, assuming a child like playground naivety this brightly precocious and tangy tasting babe is tenderly coated with a toe tapping and wonky candy pop vibe serviced by impeccably impish skewiff 50's bubblegum wraps all befuddled and dreamily powder puffed in the kind of crafty dizziness that you'd imagine the meeting of the Shaggs and the Waitresses would result in had they ever formed a best friends alliance in their secret den at the bottom of the garden. Flip le disc for the markedly far superior 'Seaside' - a sublimely fading lesson in deftly crushed melcho-pop, fractured with an introspective glaze and delicately wrapped in a beautifully hollowed sparse classical framing this humbled slice of bruised beauty sounds to these ears not unlike the beguiling charms of Shortwave Set being tethered, teased and tearfully torn by Broadcast. Perfect stuff.

Universal You 'your sin city' (joe soap). Met in Kazakhstan, named after a Cult record, 'your sin city' is the debut release from, Scottish based trio Universal You. Anything else you need to know, well lead singer Gulzhan Ibraveya has the kind of vocal pipes that could probably trace their bloodline all the way back to Jefferson's Grace Slick and Curved Air's Sonja Kristina while the opening guitar intro to 'your sin city' nods ever so slightly in the general direction of the Pixies 'bone machine' before sparking up into searing soulful 60's spanker that swaggers and struts with an assured confidence and the kind of deft application to simmering to the boil intensity inclined pop rudimentaries as is usually more commonly associated with Richard Green's Somatics. More please. www.universalyou.co.uk
